Subject: Indian Polity | Topic: Fundamental Rights

Concept Summary

Fundamental Rights are basic rights guaranteed by the Constitution of India.

They protect individual liberty, equality, religious freedom, and constitutional remedies.

They are mainly listed in Part III, Articles 12 to 35.

Key Articles

Article 14: Equality before law and equal protection of laws.

Article 19: Freedom of speech, expression, movement, association, and profession.

Article 21: Protection of life and personal liberty.

Article 32: Right to constitutional remedies; called the heart and soul of the Constitution.

Exam Relevance

Questions often compare Fundamental Rights with Directive Principles.

Article 21 is important because courts have expanded its meaning over time.

Article 32 allows citizens to directly approach the Supreme Court.
